Dear Mr. Dulles:

STAT

Two months ago at the suggestion of [redacted] STAT
I had the pleasure of talking to you in respect to possible service with the C.I.A. After also talking to Colonel [redacted] I had the impression the obstacles blocking such service could be cleared away in a week or two. It now appears they may have been insurmountable, but not having heard I can't be sure.

At present I am being pressed for a decision in respect to other jobs, but do not want to commit myself unless I am definitely "out" as far as the C.I.A. is concerned.

Would it then be too much to ask whether or not my case is still under consideration? It would be most helpful if someone could let me know.

Sincerely yours,

STAT
